

The development was designed to be “roofed” with a hanging garden of colourful creepers from tensioned steel pipes suspended under graduated opening rust-coloured woven wire mesh. These integrated greened surfaces would present a very contemporary natural and literally contextual aesthetic to the project, serving as a green canopy that would mimic the neighbouring Karura Forest.

A curving pedestrian stroll-way was designed to stretch the entire length of the internal space giving outdoor gathering spaces.

